

Course Summary

Exfoliation and Pigmentary Dispersion Glaucoma

Blair Lonsberry, OD, MA, Med, FAAO

Course Description

The following interactive presentation will explore the clinical characteristics, diagnosis, treatment and management of two of the more common secondary forms of glaucoma; exfoliation glaucoma and pigment dispersion glaucoma.

Course Learning Objectives

- Upon completion of this course the participant will be able to recognize the clinical characteristics of a patient with pigment dispersion syndrome
- Upon completion of this course the participant will be able to recognize the clinical characteristics of a patient who has developed pigment dispersion glaucoma
- Upon completion of this course the participant will be able to recommend treatment and management options for a patient with pigment dispersion glaucoma.
- Upon completion of this course the participant will be able to recognize the clinical characteristics of a patient with exfoliation syndrome
- Upon completion of this course the participant will be able to recognize the clinical characteristics of a patient with exfoliation glaucoma
- Upon completion of this course the participant will be able to recommend treatment and management options for a patient with exfoliation glaucoma.